Community Driven Development Project

Community Driven System in Democratic practices

National Community Driven Development project, being implemented by the Department of Rural Development, identifies and chooses the least developed townships through the township selection consultation meeting when selecting the project townships in which CDD Projects are to be implemented. Also, in organizing the village management committees, the head of committee and sub-committee are to be elected from the majority vote of relevant village tracks or villages and the villagers themselves select what sub-projects should be implemented. Above all, from the beginning to the end of the each project cycle, is implemented with the democratic practices of the related communities.

Objectives

The objectives of the CDDP are that the poor communities are able to enjoy benefits of easy reach to use the infrastructure through the community driven approach and to enhance the ability of government to do quick and effective response in case there were any conflicts or disasters. Such approach not only makes the improvement of the empowerment of communities, but also bring clear benefits to the communities, thanks to the reform process of the government. Moreover, it would make emerge the constructive relationship between the government and the communities.

The main objectives are:

- (1) To deliver the block grant to the community-chosen sub-projects
- (2) To make the communities improvement of drawing village development plans in cooperation with local government and also planning and implementation
- (3) To undertake the project successfully with participation of the poor, the vulnerable and the equality of gender.

Components

The project is compromised of five components.

- (a) Component 1: Block grant to community (67 %)
- (b) Component 2: Support and capacity building (20 %)
- (c) Component 3: Knowledge and learning (2 %)
- (d) Component 4: Assistance to implementation (11 %)
- (e) Component 5: Response to emergencies (0 %)

Village Development Plan

Objectives of Village Development Plan

1. Village sub-project priorities are to be chosen in the selection process of sub-projects, which are required for villages.
2. The needs of villages are to be identified by villagers themselves through applying the easy and simple PRA tools, for villagers to understand the current resources and the potential ones.
3. Although basic infrastructure is only supported in CDD, all needs and various sections of villages, are to be drawn in discussions.
4. The objective of village development plan is that any development organization can identify the needs of villages in an easy reach as a book, including all sectors drawn with an intention of village development.
